DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1, 2, 7-12, 20-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 1,131,553 to Rethorn, cited in previous Office action.

The Rethorn '553 patent discloses a rake comprising a head (15), an elongate handle (17) extending from the head, a plurality of parallel, spaced-apart, flexible tines (16) extending from the head opposite the handle, a brace (24) movable along the tines from a first position to a second position, thereby changing the effective stiffness of the tines (see Fig. 2), and a locking device (28) releasably securing the brace to the head in the first and second positions. The locking device is selectively operable to secure the brace to the head in the first and second positions. The brace (24) moves relative to the handle as the brace moves between the first and second positions. The spacing between the tines remains unchanged as the brace moves between the first and second positions.

Regarding claims 2, 7-12, 21-24: Each of the tines (16) extend through separate openings (25) in the brace. The locking device includes interlocking protrusions (18, 20). The locking device moves the brace to positions between the first and second position (i.e., inherently, the brace (24) moves between the solid line and phantom line positions indicated in Fig. 2). The locking device comprises a rotatable knob (28). The tines (16) are unremovable from the head (15). The handle extends to the tines. The head (15) includes a socket for receiving the handle (see Fig. 2).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 3-6, 15-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 1,131,553 to Rethorn.

The Rethorn '553 patent discloses the claimed invention, as stated in paragraph 2 above, except for the particularly claimed shapes or materials of construction. However, it would have been an obvious matter of design choice to construct the rake with T-shapes or cylindrical shapes or of plastic and/or metal materials.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicants' arguments filed 6/9/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

As amended, the independent claims now recite a locking device that is selectively operable to releasably secure the brace to the head in the first and second positions to prevent movement of the brace relative to the tines. As stated above, the Rethorn '553 patent discloses a brace (24) that moves along the tines (16). The Rethorn '553 patent further discloses a locking mechanism (lever 28). A user, squeezing the locking mechanism (28) against the handle, moves the brace along the tines from a first to a second position (shown in phantom in Fig. 2). The locking mechanism (28), through the wire member (29), prevents movement of the brace. In other words, when a user is holding the locking mechanism (28) against the handle, the brace is secured against movement relative to the tines. Similarly, when the locking mechanism is in the released position (shown in solid lines in Fig. 2), the brace is secured against movement relative to the tines.

While the locking mechanism of the Rethorn '553 patent is different than the locking mechanism Applicants describe in their specification, the locking mechanism Applicants describe is not the one they claim. Applicants would distinguish their locking mechanism over the Rethorn '553 patent if, for example, they included the specifics of the locking mechanism as described in paragraph 28. The current claims are not that specific, and thus the claims remain anticipated by Rethorn.
